Town of Bluffton Begins Phase 4 of Buck Island-Simmonsville Community Sewer Project

Construction is underway for Phase 4 of Buck Island-Simmonsville Community Sewer Project. This phase, also known as the Possum Point Sewer extension, will bring more than 30 homes sewer service and remove those homes from septic tanks. At the completion of this phase, this project will have provided sewer service to more than 700 residents in the Buck Island-Simmonsville community. This multi-year, multi-phase project began in 2010.

The Phase 4 sewer project begins at the intersection of Simmonsville Road and Douglis Lane and ends at Sugaree Drive. It includes homes between those points along Simmonsville Road as well as homes on Little Possum Lane and Possum Point Lane.

Jordan Construction is the contractor for this phase, which is scheduled to be complete in early spring.

More than a third of this project is funded through a Community Development Block Grant, which is awarded and administered by the South Carolina Department of Commerce.

“Converting septic to sewer service is paramount for our residents’ quality of life as well as the overall quality of our community. This project mitigates contamination to our watershed which flows into our beloved May River,” Mayor Lisa Sulka said. “This project is important to the community as a whole.”

If any residents have questions about the project, please contact Project Manager John Hutchinson at (Office: 843.706.4535).
