Bluffton's Town Clerk Sandra Lunceford, 26-Year Employee, Retires

Mayor Lisa Sulka, Town Council members and staff will honor Sandra Lunceford for her nearly 26 years of service as Bluffton's town clerk during the November 8 Town Council meeting. Lunceford retired October 20.

Lunceford has worked for the Town of Bluffton since 1991; working with four town managers, five mayors and dozens of council members.

"Sandra has literally been a witness to Bluffton's history. When she started, the town was one-square mile and more than 700 residents. Today, it is about 54 square miles with an estimated population of 19,000. Sandra has personally filed thousands of documents which detail each step of Bluffton's story," Mayor Lisa Sulka said.

"If there is anyone who made you feel at home at Town Hall, that is Sandra," Town Manager Marc Orlando said. "Sandra has a deep love for Bluffton and it showed in her daily dedication to her job and her colleagues. It was my honor to work with Sandra for more than a decade. I am grateful for her support throughout my career and as town manager. She will be missed."

Kim Chapman, formerly deputy town clerk, has been named as the new town clerk. Chapman has worked for the town since 2007, working with Mayors Hank Johnston and Lisa Sulka and for three town managers. Chapman is a graduate of the South Carolina Municipal Clerks and Treasurers Institute.
